BY CHEF ANTONIO

Closely related to turmeric and galangal, originally found in coastal, tropical and subtropical Asia, ginger is not truly found in the wild. It's the product of deliberate selection and planned breeding. Early humans inhabiting Maritimes and mainland southeast Asia created what we now know as ginger. It has become a big staple in many cuisines and with its fresh and lightly spicy taste, it's irreplaceable. Freshly available in young and mature varieties, with colours going from ivory white to pale yellow with a greenish tint, young or spring ginger has a very delicate, almost transparent skin. It doesn't require peeling and has a lighter taste than mature.

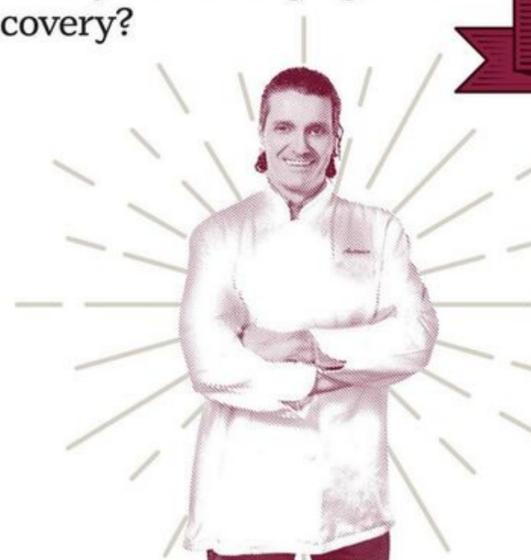

Mature roots, which is the most common product we find in our produce aisle, has a coarse, light brown skin which should be peeled. To peel mature ginger, you could use a standard veggie peeler, or to preserve more of the yummy flesh use the back of a spoon or knife and just scrape the skin off.

If you have purchased too much root, it will last in a cool dry place for several weeks without problems, or you could freeze the whole root as is and grate it directly from freezer as needed. You could also process a bunch, grate it and freeze it in ice cube trays in user friendly amounts, ready to pop out of the freezer when cooking and right into dishes to enjoy. Dry ginger powder offers several nutritional benefits similar to fresh ginger, but the fresh kind is much better for adding a more powerful flavour profile to many dishes.

Quite popular in natural medicine, and used as remedy for stomach issues, ginger has very potent anti-inflammatory properties. Rich in potassium, magnesium and manganese. Please be aware that while ginger can sooth a stomach, too much ginger could upset it, and might interfere with some prescription drugs.

There are so many applications of this delicious root. Curry, stir-fry, drinks, desserts, and so on. I personally discover new culinary innovations for ginger that constantly surprise me. What is your latest ginger root discovery?

GINGER FACTS:

Not A Root:

Ginger is actually a rhizome, a horizontal underground stem, not a true root.

Ancient Spice:

Ginger has been used for over 5,000 years, especially in Asian and Indian cuisines and traditional medicine.

Medicinal:

It has natural anti-inflammatory and antioxidant properties.

The Anti-Inflammatory Kitchen:

Foods that Support Joint Health

By: The Choices Nutrition Team

For many people, especially over the age of 60, joint stiffness or morning aches can feel unavoidable. But research shows that the foods we choose regularly can play a meaningful role in supporting joint comfort and reducing inflammation. Building an anti-inflammatory kitchen doesn't require a complete overhaul — just a few mindful additions.

1. Fatty Fish: Salmon, sardines, and mackerel are rich in omega-3 fats, which help calm inflammatory pathways in the body. If fish isn't your preference, an omega-3 supplement may be a supportive option. An in-store nutritionist or wellness consultant can help you explore choices that fit your needs.

2. Berries: Blueberries, strawberries, and raspberries are packed with antioxidants that help protect joint tissues from oxidative stress. They're delicious in smoothies, yogurt bowls, or simply on their own.

3. Leafy Greens: Spinach, kale, and Swiss chard offer vitamins and minerals that support bone and joint health. Add a handful to soups, omelettes, or stir-fries for an easy nutrient boost.

4. Olive Oil: Extra virgin olive oil contains natural compounds that can act as a gentle anti-inflammatory agent. Drizzle it over salads, vegetables, or roasted dishes for added flavour and healthy fats.

5. Nuts, Seeds & Their Oils:

Walnuts, almonds, chia seeds, and flaxseeds provide healthy fats and fibre that help support joint comfort. Ground flaxseed is especially versatile and can be added to oatmeal, yogurt, or baked goods. Flaxseed or walnut oil are great options as well and can be drizzled over salads or warm grains. Plant-based omega-3 supplements made from algae may also be a supportive option.

By incorporating these foods into your routine, you can help nourish your joints from the inside out. Small, consistent choices can support greater comfort, mobility, and overall well-being, especially as we age.

Supportive Nutrition Approach to Inflammation

By: Dionne Legge, CNP, Choices Abbotsford and Burnaby Nutritionist

Inflammation is a vital part of the body's natural healing process. However, when inflammation becomes chronic, it can contribute to a wide range of health concerns. A supportive nutrition approach focuses on nourishment, variety, and balance rather than restriction.

Spend time in the produce department and aim to “eat the rainbow.” Different colours of vegetables and fruit provide unique phytonutrients that help support the body. Include a mix of both raw and cooked produce. Some nutrients are more available in raw foods, while others become easier to absorb when lightly cooked or paired with healthy fats. Variety in both selection and preparation is key. Herbs and spices also offer beneficial plant compounds. Turmeric and ginger are a powerful pairing and can be used in cooking or enjoyed as a warm tea. Green tea is another supportive option.

Healthy fats play an essential role in nutrient absorption and in helping the body regulate inflammation. Include sources such as avocados, nuts, seeds, olive oil, and cold-water fatty fish like salmon, sardines, trout, and mackerel. Omega-3 supplements may also be helpful; consider speaking with an in-store wellness consultant to find an option suited to your individual needs. In some cases, a high-EPA supplement may be recommended.

Balancing your plate also supports healthy blood sugar levels, which is important for managing inflammation. Pair complex carbohydrates with protein and fat and aim to fill half your plate with vegetables and fruit, dividing the remaining half between whole grains or starchy vegetables and protein.

BRIGHTSIDE ORGANICS NATURA FIBRE

Brightside Organics Natura Fibre is a versatile way to boost the nutrient profile of countless meals and snacks, made from 100% certified organic ingredients including ground flaxseed, psyllium husk, dandelion root powder, burdock root powder, and fenugreek seed powder. This blend provides a rich source of soluble fibre, omega-3 and omega-6 fatty acids, and essential minerals, such as iron, magnesium, calcium, zinc, and thiamine. Because of its high fibre content, it's best to start with a small amount and increase gradually to avoid digestive discomfort, which can occur when fibre is added too quickly. The Choices Nutrition Team loves incorporating Brightside Organics Natura Fibre into morning oatmeal and parfaits, smoothies, and baking for an easy daily boost of nourishment.

120 Capsules

NAC+ was designed for superior defence against oxidative stress from over-exercise, pollutants and respiratory conditions. It features 600mg of N-Acetyl-L-Cysteine (NAC) with L-Glycine and selenium for enhanced cell protection against free radicals. NAC has mucolytic properties that help to relieve symptoms of chronic bronchitis caused by oxidative stress. Taking NAC may improve phlegm consistency in people with chronic obstructive pulmonary disease (COPD) and help to decrease flare-ups. Studies suggest that NAC may have a positive effect on reducing homocysteine levels in cases where high plasma homocysteine levels are present. Both N-Acetyl-L-Cysteine and L-Glycine are precursors to glutathione (GSH) – our critical intracellular antioxidant for the liver and brain. GSH scavenges free radicals, reducing inflammation and protecting cell mitochondria. When combined with the powerhouse mineral selenium, Vitamin E levels and glutathione peroxidase levels are further enhanced for cellular health and protection.
